

Contents

Preface	5
Contents	11
Abbreviations	15
I Introduction	17
I.1 The background.....	18
I.1.1 Preserving the unipolar moment.....	27
I.1.2 On the ground: the U.S. in Central and Eastern Europe.....	33
I.2 Empirical objectives.....	37
II The theoretical framework and methodology	41
II.1 Introduction and research questions.....	41
II.1.1 Neoclassical realism: an introduction.....	46
II.1.2 Elite perceptions: of more than just the system?.....	49
II.2 Non-friends, friends and undecided states.....	56
II.2.1 Non-friends.....	57
II.2.2 Friends.....	62
II.2.3 Concluding remarks: undecided states.....	65
II.3 Two types of power resources and foreign policy tools.....	66
II.3.1 Power in political realism.....	67
II.3.2 Positive and negative power: the relevance of base values....	72
II.3.3 Negative power and its bases.....	78
II.3.4 Positive power and its bases.....	79
II.3.5 Power resources and foreign policy tools.....	82
II.4 Linking states' friend / non-friend / undecided status to power.....	87
II.5 Concluding remarks on the theoretical framework.....	89
II.6 Methodological considerations.....	90
II.6.1 The cases.....	92
II.6.2 Sources.....	95
II.6.3 Research design: Comparative case studies.....	95

II.6.4	Three steps in addressing the sources	97
III	U.S. Foreign Policies Towards Poland	103
III.1	Introduction	104
III.2	Laying the foundations: the U.S. and Solidarność.....	107
III.2.1	Accompanying Poland to de facto independence 1989–1991	107
III.2.2	Foreign Policy Tools in Solidarność-times.....	111
III.3	An emerging new best friend in Europe: the second Gulf War and NATO enlargement	113
III.3.1	Euro-Atlantic integration or: Overcoming Yalta	113
III.3.2	Foreign policy tools 1991 to 2000.....	118
III.4	The heydays and their aftermath: 2001 onwards.....	120
III.4.1	State Tourism: Bush, Kwaśniewski and the Iraq war	121
III.4.2	Foreign policy tools 2001 to 2005.....	128
III.5	After Kwaśniewski: 2005 onwards.....	129
III.5.1	The double Kaczyński era.....	130
III.5.2	Donald Tusk, the conclusion of the Missile Defence Agreement – and still no visa waiver programme	133
III.5.3	Foreign policy tools after Kwaśniewski	137
III.6	Conclusions on U.S. foreign policies towards Poland 1989–2008.....	140
IV	U.S. Foreign Policies Towards Ukraine	145
IV.1	Introduction: America's recognition of Ukraine's independence.....	146
IV.2	The early years: Moscow-centrism and a focus on nuclear non-proliferation 1991 to 1994.....	148
IV.2.1	Solving the nuclear question	148
IV.2.2	The Lisbon Protocol and Ukraine's accession to the NPT as a nuclear-free state	150
IV.2.3	Foreign Policy Tools in solving the nuclear question.....	158
IV.3	Conventional non-proliferation: Ukraine's accession to the MTCR, Bushehr and the Satellite Deal 1994 to 1998....	160
IV.3.1	Getting Ukraine to join the MTCR.....	161

IV.3.2	The Policy of issue linkage: non-proliferation, nuclear power plants and satellites.....	165
IV.3.3	Foreign Policy Tools in making Ukraine join the MTCR...	167
IV.4	Euro-Atlantic integration: Ukraine in its wider context 1994 to 2004	169
IV.4.1	The U.S.-Ukrainian honeymoon: broadening relations	169
IV.4.2	Setbacks and frustration.....	174
IV.4.3	Multilateralising Ukraine's transformation: Ukraine and NATO	179
IV.4.4	Foreign Policy Tools in promoting Ukraine's Euro-Atlantic integration.....	183
IV.5	After the Orange Revolution: diminished U.S. interest 2004 to 2008.....	186
IV.5.1	Few illusions left: the Orange Revolution and its aftermath.....	186
IV.5.2	Foreign policy tools 2004 to 2008.....	193
IV.6	Conclusions on U.S. foreign policies towards Ukraine	195
V	U.S. Foreign Policies Towards Belarus	199
V.1	Introduction: At odds with the West	200
V.2	Belarus and the US: the early years	202
V.2.1	Belarus: The unproblematic answer to the nuclear question.....	202
V.2.2	Foreign policy tools in early U.S.-Belarusian relations.....	204
V.3	Lukashenka and "Selective Engagement" with Minsk	205
V.3.1	Rigged elections and referenda: Deteriorating relations....	205
V.3.2	The Belarus Democracy Act	209
V.3.3	Political Prisoners, Sanctions and Personae Non Gratae	212
V.3.4	"Selective engagement" and foreign policy tools.....	214
V.4	The wider context: Belarus in international politics.....	216
V.4.1	The Bush II era: Belarus as a rogue state?	216
V.4.2	Belarus and Euro-Atlantic Integration	219
V.4.3	The wider context and foreign policy tools.....	222
V.5	Conclusions on U.S. foreign policies towards Belarus 1991–2008	223

VI Conclusions.....	229
VI.1 Returning to the research questions.....	229
VI.2 Empirical findings: U.S. post-Cold War policies towards Poland, Ukraine and Belarus	231
VI.3 Implications for theory building: linking status to power	237
VI.3.1 Friends, non-friends and undecided states: an element of the missing link	237
VI.3.2 A category of its own: undecided states.....	239
VI.3.3 Positive and negative power as means to shape and control the environment.....	241
VI.4 Final remarks.....	244
Annex.....	247
High-level contacts between the U.S. and Poland, Ukraine and Belarus	247
References	251
Primary Sources.....	251
Speeches, Press Releases and Briefings.....	251
Background Notes	258
Treaties, Laws, Reports and Official Strategies	261
Websites.....	262
Books and Articles.....	263
Media Sources.....	274